INTRODUCTION

Bastar district of Madhya Pradesh (Now in Chhattisgarh) is a tribal district included under intensive Rural Development Programme. Rapid reconnaissance soil survey was done. Jagdalpur is the district headquarters. The district has an area of 10755.13km². It lies between 19°45' and 20°30' N latitude and 80°00' and 82°15' E longitude. It is bounded by Raichandragan, Durg and Raipur districts in the north, Koraput district of Orissa in the east, Kanker and Bilaspur districts of Andhra Pradesh in the south and Gadchiroli district of Maharashtra in the west. Total geographical area of the district is 39,061km² is distributed in 8 talukas having 31 blocks.

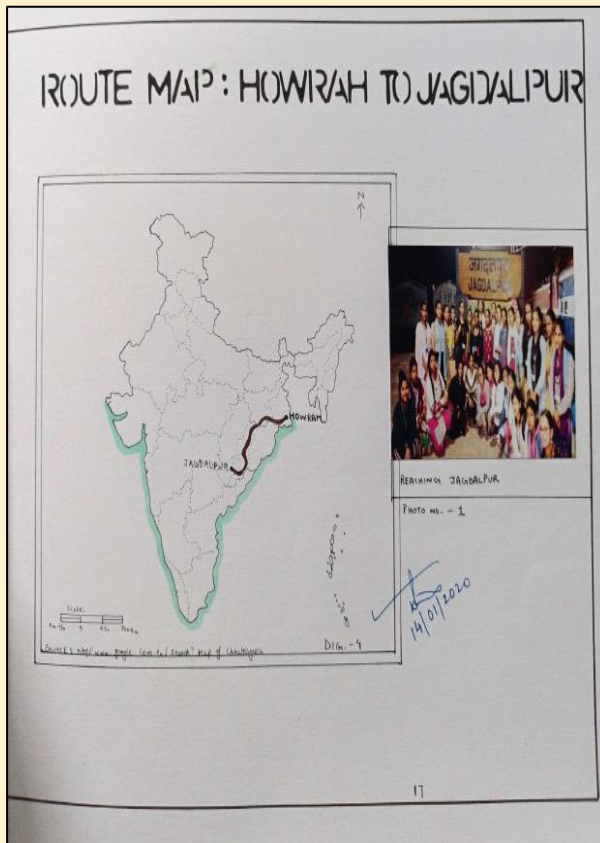

Bastar state was princely state in India during the British Rule. It was founded in the early 19th century, by Annama Deva, the brother of Kakatiya King Pratapa Rudra Deva of Warangal (Telangana). After Indian independence in 1947, the princely states of Bastar and Kanker acceded to the Govt of India, and were merged to form Bastar district of Chhattisgarh.
